From: Robert Redoutey
Topic: 1 Message: 1

Plans are underway to be active during the AANR Southwest Convention the end of June. We should be on the air on June 25th and 26th. We will be sponsoring a Ham Radio Demonstration on Friday from 3-5pm CDT on or near 14.265 (20:00 - 22:00Z).

NU5DE will be participating during Field Day June 27/28 running Solar Power from McDade, TX

In July we will be active during Nude Recreation Week, July 6-12 mainly on the 9th, 10th and 11th.

Please look for us and give us a call.

73,

Bob, N5KF
Trustee NU5DE

Lucy and I are going to have to put a half decent 20 metre aerial together.

Thanks for continuing to operate during Nude Recreation Week. I will be looking for you on 14.265 on July 11. I am going yo work in Alaska on the 12th so that day is probably not in the works for me.

Maybe next year I will drag the Airstream down there from here in Central NM and give you a hand operating. It would be fun!!

Hi Bob,

Do you know if the TNS SIG for Ham Radio is active on the air? I wonder what frequencies they use and if they have any usual hours. I know they set up stations at gatherings but have never heard or worked any of them.

Don,

The TNS SIG is all part of INARO, which the Naturist Amateur Radio Club is part of. I guess you could say we are all tied in together. The SIG probably started first, but it currently is not really active. The web site is not up to date and there have not been any newsletters in quite a while. _www.inaro.com_ (http://www.inaro.com) .

We use to meet on Thursday evenings at 0000Z on 14.265, but have not meet there is a while as to a regular net.

The club, Naturist Amateur Radio Club, is active under the call of NU5DE with a number of activities through out the year. I primarily head that up, where Jim Campbell, WB6ZPB heads up the TNS SIG and INARO.

I believe that there is one NU_DE call that is part of the TNS SIG that is a little active. I believe its NU1DE. NU7DE might also be part of the SIG as well...not positive. Perhaps its time to put a NU_DE newsletter together?

Last count there are NU1DE, NU2DE, NU3DE, NU4DE, NU5DE, NU7DE and NU9DE. Most are club stations, but not all. They are are part of Nude Recreation. By far NU5DE is the most active.

Just about ready to head out to Star Ranch and operate for a few days under NU5DE for Nude Recreation Week. There is one other operator scheduled for this afternoon through Friday, and a few more for Friday and Saturday. Info is listed in QST Magazine or on line under _www.arrl.org_ (http://www.arrl.org) .

I hope I have answered your question.

Thanks,

Good morning, all....

The Amateur Radio Portable Operations Group (ARPOG) is a group of hams that set up portable amateur radio stations to "show off" the capabilities of amateur radio (our primary function) and to just have fun. ARPOG turns 1 year old on August 28th, 2009. Come check out our Yahoo group at: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ARPortable/

Hard to say right now, we do plan on being on the week after the 4th of July for NRW. (July 5-11)

Other weekends vary. We are usually on for FD as well as Texas QSO Party in September.

Its sort of hit or miss...if you really need a contact, we can arrange a time to meet with you on 40/20/10M on a weekend (or even sometimes on Monday's, as I am currently off on Monday's).

Thanks,

Hi Bob,

I was not wanting a contact--I have a qsl card already.

Actually I was thinking of dragging the travel trailer down to Starr Ranch and assisting with operating if you were going to have a special event station for AANR nude recreation week. I suppose they have rv parking, etc.

Thanks

Sure, come on over. Always great to have another operator join for the week...or any time you can make it.

Yes, they have all kinds of RV parking. Not positive on their rates, but they are usually pretty reasonable.

We will have an Yaesu FT 920 set up, as well as IC736 and IC706 as back up radio's. Just the A3 at 40 ft for beams, and a G5RV that sometimes doesn't behave quite right. I also have a vertical that I am planning on putting up as well. We have a 6M vertical that doesn't see all that much use up on the lot right now.

Let me know what you decide.

Thanks,

Bob Redoutey N5KF / NU5DE

I have had it confirmed, the call sign is GB0C(andy)F(arm)N(aturally).
Lucy (M0LUY/my xyl) and I will have a look at all bands (note, I'm not CW capable)
Prime bands should be 20 and 17 metres to get across The Pond.
If Lucy can get it to work she will be QRV on PSK31.
NU5DE seem to favour 14.265 so I think that could be somewhere to start.

Brad,

I often consider the odds here. Not very many ham radio operators relative to the general population then factor in those who are practicing nudism and the number gets pretty small pretty fast. Then you have to consider the "closet" ones and even fewer pop up.

Personally, I am an at-home nudist who will go to a resort or beach but it is not my primary focus in life. I don't think I could devote the majority of my time and effort to the "cause" like some have done.

Having said all that I am active on 20m, 15m, and sometimes 40m but not so much lately. I have a new hex-beam that is 6 bands. I also have a Paragon, Jupiter and a SB200 linear. I do some 2m stuff but get bored quite soon with it. I am chasing OMISS awards and need only one state (UT) for my WAS. I also think I have quite a few cards from around the world and plan to see if I have a start on a DXCC.

I usually catch N5UDE in July when they are active during the AANR week.

Thanks for joining this group, Brad.

I'm going to give it a try again (from San Jose, CA).
I have even printed out a Miniprop to see when would be good.

I have certificates from 94, 95, 96, 97, 99, and 2000, but I haven't managed to make contact since then. I wondering if that is when I started using one of those multiband verticals. Maybe I can check this out.

I enjoyed our contact Friday. I was on my lunch break scanning the band and found you. There is a couple of nudist resorts by me. 1 about 1 hour away and the other 1 1/2 hours away. Been to both. But with the rising cost of fuel, I haven't been in awhile.

My setup : 1994 Buick Century wagon, Icom 706 MKIIG, LDG Tuner and a modified Yaesu ATAS 100 antenna on the right rear bumper. The ATAS antenna was on the top of the car and got busted by a tree. Snapped the loading coil in half. So I pulled all the guts out and just put the screwdriver coil and motor back in and ran external wires to control the motor. I have it mounted with a 3/8"x24 stud. It used to be mounted with a UHF mount.

We talked 7/13/2012 @ 5:15pm EST on 14.265.

We were on, over 400 QSO's. Mostly on 20M. Clobbered by DX on Saturday, Sunday conditions were terrible, then thunderstorms came in, and brought things to an end early. Friday was probably the only decent day. 10M was dead, 15 & 40M not much better.

Thanks to all that we did contact.

Pete,

They have been pretty reasonable to singles.

If you come out to only talk on the Ham Radio, they will wave the gate fee. But that means no pool or hot tub, hiking the trails, etc. I have had several come out and just operate radio.

As the club trustee, I would have to coordinate with you as to when you come out, of course, if you were wanting to get on the radio.

Let me know your plans.

Hi Bob;
If I spend the time (almost an hour) to drive out to McDade I certainly want to enjoy whatever amenities the ranch has to offer and visit with whoever else is out there. The fee would be a paltry issue. My wife is a nudist too, but has no interest in visiting Star Ranch.
Is there any schedule for regular operation?

Currently the next "scheduled" radio event will be for the North American QSO Party SSB in January.

We did mostly search and pounce, didn't hold a freq very much.

We found out we are having issues with our very old beam (A3) It looks like the 20m traps are bad for one reason or another. Ended up using the trap vertical and the G5RV for contacts on all bands but 10M, where the beam seems to still work fine.

At least it was a perfect day to be out at Star Ranch in McDade, TX.

We ended up with a little under 200 QSO's across 80-10 meters, not to bad for us "casual" operators.

Thanks,

Bob Redoutey, N5KF / NU5DE.

Hi Guys,

We are planning to have a NCH (Nudist Club House) Net on Saturday, the 2nd. I will be on 14,265 at 13:30 CST and will look around for any stations interested in the net.

Usually there is a path from my QTH to the midwest and eastern states around that time. All are welcome.

We can do this. It is just a matter of setting up a convenient time and frequency that will work for most.

The NCH members have been using 14,265 MHz on Saturdays at 13:30 CST but that is certainly not fixed in concrete. I know NU5DE uses that freq also.

There is another group--ham-naturists-- on YAHOO that is made up of hams from down under. There times are different, of course, but it would be nice to include them in the net if possible.

My problem is that I travel and am not available all of the time. I will certainly make all of the nets that I can.

Thanks for your interest in a net.

Hi Don,

No, nothing too much this year. One member expressed some interest. I changed jobs and don't have the time off any more, so it will mainly be a Friday, Saturday and hopefully Sunday event. I don't expect to have operators available during the week this year.

If things change I will post to the group here.

Hi Bob;
In the event I can attend, how do I go about getting "clearance"?
I understand they run background checks on everybody, and I don't expect they can do it "on the fly".

Thanks Bob,

I'll look for you on the air on the weekend.

Maybe next year I will not be working and I can drag the travel trailer down to Texas during the week and help with the operating. That would be fun.

I plan to have another sked for NCH group soon but work keeps getting in the way!!

Well, I was on, as noted below with a reasonable run going on 20M, the Collins guy sort of "pushed his way on", and I politely bowed out. Shortly after than the sky opened up, it poured buckets...and I had to disconnect the antennas. By the time it started to let up, it was time to head home, from McDade to Georgetown. I know I missed quite a few, but conditions were really bad. I wish they had been better. I did a lot of CQing with no returns.

I got things all hooked up late Friday night, but I didn't get on till Saturday morning, and with the IARU contest, pretty much stuck to 40M, where there was some elbow room. Sunday was all on 20M, but just not enough hours in the day. We are usually on starting Thursday eve, but it wasn't going to happen this year due to work, and lack of operators till Saturday.

Should be back out there in a few weeks. Worse case, we are planning on operating for the Texas QSO Party in late September...should be able to find us there. If I know I will be out before that (I am sure I will), I can send out an email on here, maybe catch some of the ones I missed this weekend.

Bob, Thanks for posting the information about Sunday.

The WX can be a pain for sure as well as intentional QRM. Some nets have long term established frequencies and try to secure them early to make sure they are there when the real time comes. I usually do as you did and QSY to another frequency.

I appreciate your efforts to be active during the Nudist Recreation Week every July. It is an important thing to do.

Hi Guys,

Do you have EchoLink/IRLP capabilities? The fellows down under have suggested that these modes might be more convenient for a round-table net due to the propagation problems with HF.

Has anyone used the reflectors that make this all possible?

Thanks

I am looking for suggested times for a net using EchoLink. VK3JED, Tony, in Australia has offered his reflector for our use on a regular basis. He is a member of the Ham Naturist group on Yahoo! and would like to be able to participate in the discussions. There is a 11-12 hour time differential between the US and Australia so it might limit the possible times.

Anyway please contact me with your preferences for a day of the week and time of day for a net. I picture having a net about every other week or so.

I would like to invite all nudist hams or those interested in nudism to participate whether they are members of our group or not.

Thanks for the reply. I have added you to the list and will advise about a time.

Do you have an idea of what would be a convenient time for you to participate in the net?

BTW. Do you have a personal email address that we could add to our group mailing list? It will only be used for general notification about net times, etc. Not all nudist hams check these groups and we are going to try to get as many as possible involved.

The net last evening went well with 3 operators logged in. That is about what I expected. Those who checked in contributed to interesting conversation including topics about nudism as well as some about hobbies, etc.

The net lasted about an hour.

I think we will leave the net at the current time for at least a few months. It is hard to get consensus about the best time and there will never be a perfect time that fits all.

I am thinking that we might have another net next Saturday but I will post a definite schedule here soon.

Thanks to all who checked into the net last evening. We have decided to leave the schedule where it is for the time being and see what happens. It seems to be fairly convenient --early night-time here and mid day "down under".

So the next net will be Saturday, 30 AUG 2014 at 02:00 zulu. Same node, VK3JED # 42840 unless we change and I will post the new node here.

Sorry folks, since last Friday I have been victim of a terrific attack of the shingles and was not able to be on the net last week. I actually forgot since I was totally preoccupied. It is getting better now but due to a prior commitment I will not be able to be on the net this Saturday also. I will ask N5KF, Bob, to moderate the net if he has time.

Check in at the normal time, 02:00 zulu and if no moderator is there go ahead and feel free to have a net with whoever else shows up.

As usual, EchoLink node 42840 which is maintained by Tony VK3JED.

I will be back in a week.

Hi Bob,

We had two on the net as you know. If anyone knows of other places/sites to announce the net let me know and I will drop them a line too.

I know the Travelites club has some ham operators and surely there are others out there. Also, if anyone has ideas about time and mode we will consider all possibilities for sure.

I may be out of pocket next Saturday because we will have some out of town guests and I don't know now what will be happening. I will check with my social director and let you know later in the week.

Hi Bob,

Sorry for the confusion. I thought of the time thing at the last minute and figured it would be a problem.

No one showed up.

I will be out of the country until the first of December. We are going to Peru for a vacation. Please feel free to take the net if you can fit it into your schedule.

I am stalled on the article for "N". I have lots of things written down but am struggling with how to fit the QSL card section in. Also, if you have examples of they type of cards we are talking about I would like to have some copies of them.

Thanks

I am using a MAC running OS X and Aether for a logging program. My initial problem is that the location of the logging file from WSJT or JT65 HF is not where I expected it to be. Since these programs are run using Crossover and WineSkin to emulate Windows it seems that the log file is hidden somewhere. The file location specified in the set-up menu contains a .csv file which is a record of ALL activity including received and transmitted messages and not just completed QSOs. That file should be in the .adif format then it could be imported to the logging program.

I have tried setting up the new WSJT-X program but my small mini-mac cannot be updated to the minimum requirements of that program. Running it and not using the Crossover/WineSkin routine might be a cleaner way to operate.

Otherwise, the mode is fun and I have made about 30 contacts so far.

Thanks, Jim.

Hi Don,

JT is a great DX mode. I discovered it after I got sucked into the W1AW Centennial madness and some of the portables were coming up on JT65.

I use WSJT-X natively under Linux. I can't speak to the Mac specifically, but maybe my Linux experiences will be of some use. JT-X does indeed write an ADIF log file in the same folder as the .csv file, named wsjtx_log.adi. I have to do a little dance after every session to import the log into my N3FJP log on the Windoze box upstairs, which consists of copying the file to a Windows share and converting to the DOS/Win EOL format.

But that doesn't help you. I did use JT65 HF for a very short time, but I don't remember much about it. I do recall that Wine under Linux creates a hidden folder in the Home directory. Therein it creates folders for your typical DOS/Win devices, including the C: drive, and mounts them as virtual devices. The Windows directory tree is directly accessible from Linux once you find the hidden folder. But you probably know all this.

I'll have to look and see if I still have JT65 HF on that machine. I don't recall if I had it in Wine or in the VirtualBox WinXP session. VirtualBox approaches things a little differently, it creates a big file and mounts it as a virtual hard drive. To get files to and from there I need to connect to a local or network shared folder through the VirtualBox emulation layer.

Again, probably not helpful. I'll have a look and see if I can find anything out. I haven't been in the shack much at all today, still recovering from the last day of the Centennial event yesterday. I think my radio misses me....

OK, I do still have a functional JT65 HF load under Wine. It looks like I made exactly one contact with it before I discovered WSJT-X. The log file jt65hf_log.adi was placed in the Documents folder of my Linux /home/~ (user Home) folder. The /home/~ folder is mapped as the Windows Z: drive by Wine. Whether this is the way the program set itself up or if I did it is something I don't recall, but there it is. The .csv file is set to go to C:\users\myusername\Local Settings\Application Data\JT65-HF\ . This is actually /home/~/.wine/drive_c/users/myusername/Local Settings/Application Data/JT65-HF/ in the Linux file system. As for how this translates to the Mac world, your guess is probably better than mine. I haven't played with Mac since the System 6 era. The only other thing that I can think of offhand is that maybe you are trying to save the log somewhere that you don't have proper permissions, but I would think that if you are pointing to the same location as the .csv file it should work.

Jim,

Thanks for taking the time to research my problem.

Your experience is just like mine where the .csv file is concerned. That location is defined when set-up is configured. One thing I did do was to run the reconfigure routine. It asks if you want to save the JT65HF_log.adif file as well as the .csv file. Since I had no idea where the .adif file was and was unable to open it I said "Yes".

The latest thing I have tried was changing the file location that appears when the "Log QSO" radio button is pushed. I redirected the file to "Desktop" and guess what it now appears on my OS X desktop and seems to be updating.

I would like to be using WSJT-X but like I mentioned my mini-Mac has OS X 10.6.4 and the program requires 10.7. I tried to upgrade to the later version but I guess the memory or something in my computer is not compatible with that version. I may investigate what physical improvements are needed. Man, it's always something with this stuff. I have 7 Apple machines that are all networked together which works great until you want to run a Windows program. Actually Crossover and Wine work pretty well with just a few glitches like the file location, etc.

Thanks, Bob.

I need a small lightweight antenna that will be easy to set up and pack away. I think the BuddiStick will do the job. I have two tripods that Bonnie no longer uses -- one is fairly tall at about 5 feet while the other is only about 3 feet. I picture the vertical on the taller one and the radial counterpoise attached to the shorter one about 16 feet away when operating on 20 meters. I think I can test the antenna and mark the lengths prior to using it and be pretty close which would make setting it up a quick process.

Snowing here this morning and 20 deg f.

I'm glad you got it working. I still have a fondness for the Macs after all these years. I actually felt guilty for taking money for labor when doing memory upgrades to Macs back in the day when you still had to do BIOS fiddling and OS tweaking on PCs. It was literally a 10 minute job on the Macs.

Other than a bug somewhere that occasionally crashes fldigi I have been very happy with the way the native Linux applications work. Although I use VNC to access the Win7 machine where my log and the DXLab applications reside, I could just as easily run them in the VirtualBox environment. It's a hoot to run WinXP as an application uner Linux and I am consistenlty pleased with just how well it seems to work with VirtualBox. So far I have tested MMSSTV, DXLab, and N3FJP logging programs with networking and they all work. JT65HF may be there as well, I didn't look last night. Wine works OK with some stuff like MMSSTV and JT65HF, but other programs not so much. Moving files around between the DOS/Win environment and Linix is a little easier under Wine as I've already noted. With VB you can have the usual issues with maintaining a huge file in your file system that is mounted as a virtual hard drive. It's all relative. Modern Linux distros have come a long way from the fiddly geek fodder of 15 years ago. Independence from Microsoft is the ultimate goal.

I played around for about 3 years with Red Hat before it went real commercial. Never did anything with the other distributions though. I liked Linux and thought it might be a real player in the OS market but MS and Apple dominate the software end of things so Open Source seems to still be behind the curve.

I have been playing with Arduino for a few years and my latest project is to display the data from my Ten-Tec Rebel on my laptop. I added a board to the main board in the radio that sends the data wirelessly using XBee radio. I then receive the data with another XBee and use CoolTerm a serial display program to show me the information in a small window on the laptop. Since I need to keep the laptop open anyway for logging it is not a bother to display the user information.

I wanted to set up a LCD display but my experiments showed a real lag between what was happening with the radio like freq. changes and what was getting to the LCD. I have not tried to figure that out and am sticking with the CoolTerm solution. I rewrote the program and send only the data that I need to operate the radio. That keeps the window small and easy to read.

Maybe behind the curve a little, but Linux has come a long way. I've been playing with it for at least 15 years, and my APRS digi is arguably the longest contunuously running digi in Nebraska with an old Debian 2.2 load on a vintage IBM PS/2 Microhannel box. I keep a quad core Win7 box running for daily mundane tasks and those Windows programs that I have time and/or money into, but Linux has found a home in the shack.

I stumbled across a great price last year on a dual-core i5 Asus laptop and bought it with the intention of loading Linux on it. For fun I decided to give myself a week to like WIndows 8. It didn't even take a week before I pulled the hard drive out (because I PAID for that Windows 8, dammit!) and put in a new drive. A surprsingly short time later the most recent Kubuntu was loaded and I never looked back.

The KDE desktop in Kubuntu is visually stunning and makes Windows look like the toy it is. There are gazillions of applications in the repositories, and between fldigi and WSJT-X I have most of the digital modes covered with Linux native software. I see now that there is a Qt SSTV application, I'll have to give that a look.

I can see Linux becoming my daily driver at some point. It seems like anything that will run in XP will work fine in a VirtualBox session. I haven't tried Win7 in VB yet because I don't know how things will fly with that "phone home" nonsense. Otherwise, Win7 doesn't suck and I've found it amusing that M$ has over the years been slowly adding features to new Windows versions that I am already accustomed to from my OS/2 and Mac experiences. Win8 is just plain a non-starter for me. If M$ doesn't get it any better than that I will migrate fully to Linux sooner than later.

Cheers,

I added a board to the main board in the radio that sends the data wirelessly using XBee radio. I then receive the data with another XBee and use CoolTerm a serial display program to show me the information in a small window on the laptop. Since I need to keep the laptop open anyway for logging it is not a bother to display the user information.

I have not tried to figure that out and am sticking with the CoolTerm solution. I rewrote the program and send only the data that I need to operate the radio. That keeps the window small and easy to read.

You are welcome.

I am finally catching up on odds and ends around here and trying to get current on my QSLs is one of those time consuming tasks that has been neglected too long. I am working out a logging routine using Aether on two machines that will work well I hope.

I bought a used Buddstick that will arrive soon and I am looking forward to doing some portable operating using my T-T Rebel. It is doing a good job and my display idea is easy to read and current. I still have not decided which battery to buy. Weight is a consideration and the more Ah the greater the weight, of course.

SOTA sounds interesting--I live within 11 miles of 3 of the designated peaks in our state. One is easy to get to and the other 2 are a simple walk from the end of the road, I think. I have been to one already with another group. It is at 9500' and the other 2 are over 10,000'.

CU on the net, Bob.

Looking for operators for the Texas QSO Party this weekend.

Saturday 9am to 9pm
Sunday 9am to 3pm

Operate all or any part of the contest. We will have at least 2 rigs going, maybe 3. We usually have one on 20 SSB on the beam at 40 ft, and one on 40M on the vertical. Lots of contacts, we usually make over 700 QSO's...with plenty of time to enjoy the pool and campground.

Held at the club cabin at Star Ranch Nudist Resort, McDade TX. Ground fee's apply, unless you ONLY operate, and do not use the facilities...then there is no gate fee. Limited food available.

Please give me a call, or drop me an email.

Thanks,

Bob,

Do you plan to be on the air tomorrow, Sunday? I was busy as a one-legged-man at a square dance today and did not get on the air until about 17:00 CDT. I did not see you around 14.265 but worked a few other stations in the QSO party.

Thanks

The next "N" magazine will include my article about nudist hams in a very generic manner. It is less than I would have wanted but still projects the image I wanted to have readers view. I have found that it is really difficult to write to a broad audience about a technical subject and confine it to the editorial constraints.

I think we should take every opportunity to expose (pun intended) ourselves to the general population in order to keep interest up in this section of the nudist lifestyle.

Hi ya'll N4ISF here from middle TN. I'm so technically inclined I don't talk much live, my mind works in pictures better, inventor type mind. kind of slow in words. not currently active with a working radio, have some in past, might more in future. Got into ham radio for it's technical side back about 1980. Also enjoyed nude outdoor recreation since about then as well, but didn't really understand naturism until a few years ago and then started doing woods work and hiking naked with a purpose as a legitimate exercise. I also enjoy gardening, plan on going larger scale with it outside and inside with greenhouse production. I've put together a small foundry and machine shop to make my own engine parts. Plan on building a few steam engines to help with my ag work. I know communication here is kinda slow but thought I'd mention I'm here anyway having common interest of ham radio and naturism, and might catchya on the air eventually.

NU5DE is planning to be on for most of the contest from Star Ranch, McDade, Texas (40 miles east of Austin). Mostly SSB on 40-10M, depending on conditions and crowds. We will have our beam at 40 ft, a ground mounted trap vertical, and hopefully a 40 M dipole (still needs to go up on the tower).

Hope to work other NU*DE stations.

I just wanted to send out a hello to my fellow nudists. I am an active ham radio operator, with the call sign of W8NUD. Yes it is a vanity callsign that I requested a few years ago. I have been licensed since the early 90's, and a nudist, as well as my family, for about 20 years. My 10 year old grand-daughter is a 3rd generation nudist and enjoys the life style. I'm originally from Michigan, but moved to New York about a year and a half ago. I have never set up an HF station at any of the resorts that I have spent time at, however I have operated 2 meters and 440 while I have been there. I would so much like to contact the NU5DE station to exchange QSL cards, as well as any other nudist operators, especially ones with calls that promote nudism. I have a general class license, and have a very working HF station on 20,40, and 80 meters. If anyone wants to give me a time and or frequency to try to set up a QSO. I always send an SASE with my card.

Sure, we can set up a SKED. I assume you will still be operating from New York and I think the 20 meter band is pretty good in the a.m. here. I can usually hear the SATERN net guys on 14.260 when the start around 14:30 zulu.

Station here is only 100 watts so conditions have to be pretty good unless you do CW. It is usually a little more efficient and can work when other modes fade out. I do have a directional hex-beam antenna which helps with difficult contacts. The bands have been iffy lately for sure. Yesterday I activated a NPOTA location, PV19, and the QSB was quite evident.

Anyway, I am in New Mexico and am around most of the time during the week. Retirement helps ham radio, for sure.

Let me know when you would like a SKED. I can do other bands also but 40 & 80 are on a vertical which works but not as well as the hex-beam.

Thank you for the reply. 40 and 80 work best for me, but I can hit 20 also. Yes I am in New York, a transplant from Michigan (that's why the "8"). I see that NU5DE uses 14.265 and 7.265 often, so I will start listening on there.
Today is Sunday, and it is early afternoon, so I will try to start listening at the top of the hour for today and tomorrow on those frequencies to see if I hear you, or anyone else that wishes to contact me. If the frequency is in use, I will just monitor and wait. I run an Icom IC-725 on a G5RV antenna, and I do have a little extra kick with a clipperton L amp. Although my radio only puts out about 40-60 watts, it only drives the amp to 400-500 watts, but hell, it kicks, LOL.

Hi Sherris,

I am the club trustee, and we can work you pretty easy from Central Texas. We usually operate from Star Ranch Nudist Resort in McDade, TX, just east of Austin.

As the club trustee, I can work you from the house as well. We work M-F, but are open most weekends or evenings.

Out next official event will be the Texas QSO Party the last weekend of September, but we are on from the club station several times a month, as time and operators allow.

Happy to make sked from my house or the club cabin. My house could be more accommodating.

Let me know,

Thanks Thom. I will be out there this weekend listening and even calling for you. Maybe when you get the HF up and running good you can drop a note on here of approx freqs you may be on. I know I know, with the way conditions are you may have to go 100 khz in either direction even while posting the message, LOL. I'm in northern NY, and 40 meters early to late evening is great for getting back into 8 and 9 land. I never made it to Paradise Gardens when I lived back there. My main resort was turtle lake, however they were getting a tad bit to upscale for my tastes over the last few years, so I started going to forest hills and Whispering oaks. I've been living here in NY for the last year and a half,

I see that the Texas QSO party is tomorrow and sunday. Is the NU5DE going to be an active participant? I would so much like to make contact for a QSL card. Some people want that little known island, or tiny country with only a few hams there. Me, I want the NU5DE. I know it is impossible to set a time and frequency when you will be operating during the contest, but if you could maybe narrow it down. Maybe which band you will be favoring, and what time you think would be best that your operators will be on the air. The New York QSO party is on Oct 15th. I wanted to be a part of that and support my county. Turns out that is the day of my sons wedding, and I'm the best man. Damn kids ruin everything, LOL.

I do with a couple of rigs. A Red Hot 20M (5 watts) and with a K3 turned down (down to 100 mw).

I'm currently in the NW. Going to a club in Oregon this coming weekend and will do a discussion on ham radio and nudism. I'm a ham & AANR member. In a few months my wife and I will be moving to Florida. We'd be interested in starting or at least helping to start a nudist ham group on OR & FL. Any ideas about how to get things started? Sam 73, K?7?B? Thanks.
